EVENTS IN MOSCOW ECHO AT SPY TRIAL

Special to The New York Times

NEWARK, Oct. 16—Premier Khrushchev's ouster echoed today in the espionage trial of a New Jersey electronics engineer and a Russian chauffeur in Federal Court here.

Judge Anthony T. Augelli denied a defense motion for a mistrial or adjournment. The motion asserted that yesterday's events in Moscow had created an "atmosphere" that precluded a fair and impartial trial.

"What would you have the court do," the judge asked, "postpone the trial until we have an era of stability and guaranteed peace?"

The motion was made by Raymond A. Brown, the lawyer for John W. Butenko, the engineer, of Orange. He and Igor A. Ivancov, 34 years old, who was employed by Amtorg, the Soviet trading agency, in New York, are charged with conspiring to transmit to the Soviet Union classified information relating to the Strategic Air Command.

The information allegedly was taken from the International Electric Corporation in Paramus, where Mr. Butenko, who is 38, was employed.

Samuel A. Lerner, Mr. Ivancov's lawyer, did not join in the request. However, he and Mr. Brown had earlier sought an adjournment on the ground that the trial and the national election campaign would be coming to a conclusion at about the same time.

The selection of a jury continued today, the sixth day of the trial. It will resume on Monday.
